Save Your Cell Phone Battery

Cell phone battery life ranks pretty high in importance when choosing a cell phone. But what about after you've had that phone for a few months? There are many tips to improving battery life.

Below are just a few basic ones:

- Silence your phone.
- Decrease the brightness of your screen.
- Disable auto brightness.
- Switch your screen to dark mode.
- Use WiFi when possible.
- Use airplane mode.
- Keep your battery between 30% and 80% charged.
- Turn on power saving mode.

There are also apps out there you can download to improve your battery life and keep you aware of your battery health.

Greenify is one of the most popular battery saving apps. It identifies apps that wake up your phone more frequently and puts them into hibernation when you're not actively using them.

According to the AccuBattery app every time you charge your device, it wears out the battery, lowering its total capacity. The app tells you how long you can use your device when it's active or in standby mode, so you don't have to hang around a charging station all the time. With a built-in charge alarm, the app will signal when it's sufficiently powered up.

The best way to save battery is to understand where your drain comes from and try to fix it at the source. Don't feel forced to do all of these tricks or use an app, decide what you can do and still be able to enjoy the use of your phone!
