Streaming Tips and Tricks

Watching just one episode of something on a streaming service may set up your recommendations (or ruin them) for a while. Say you watched an episode of "Is It Cake?" on Netflix, and now only cooking competition shows are being recommended. Well you're in luck, because the people at Komando.com researched hacks to improve your streaming recommendations.

Your history is the biggest indicator of what will be recommended to you. To clean up your history on different streaming sites, read below:

In Netflix, log in to your account page from your computer (don't use the app) and go to Profile & Parental Controls and select your profile. Select Viewing Activity to scroll through and remove titles you don't like (click Show More to see them all).

For Amazon Prime Video, log in to your Amazon Prime account from your computer and hover over Account & Lists. Click Account, and scroll to the Digital Content and Devices list, then click Prime Video settings. Click the Watch History tab to delete videos and shows you don't like.

Hulu is a little more time intensive. Log in to the Hulu app, then go to Continue Watching to view your watch history. (Note: this only includes recently watched content). Remove a video or show by clicking the three dots in the top left corner of the thumbnail. If you want your entire viewing history, you'll need to head to Account > Your U.S. State Privacy Rights > Request Report. Clicking thumbs-down on a show or movie you don't like will remove it from your home screen and the "Up Next" and "You May Also Like" areas.

Having a profile for each member of your account makes all the difference. That way you won't get recommendations for a cartoon when you love spy thrillers.

All the major streaming services let you create several profiles per account: Netflix gives you up to five accounts, Amazon Prime Video gives you six, and Hulu gives you seven. You can also create one that you use for family movie night.

Happy streaming!

Cell Phones for Soldiers

Our offices are drop-off locations for Cell Phones for Soldiers. Donated phones are wiped of personal information and refurbished for sale or responsibly recycled in parts.

Since 2004, they have provided more than 400 million minutes of free talk time and recycled more than 25 million cell phones reducing the impact on landfills.

Proceeds are used to purchase prepaid international calling cards for troops and to provide emergency funding for veterans.
